IMPACT OF GLOBALIZATION AND TECHNOLOGY ON BEHAVIOR AND EVERYDAY PRACTICES: CROSS-CULTURAL STUDIES

OUTLINES

Nowadays, there are many evidences about the multidimensional impact of the globalization process and technology on everyday life. Millions of persons around the world use technological devices, structures and systems that influence the society as a whole and the behavior of people. Globalization influences also urban landscapes and many cultural expressions as ways of life, food and fashion patterns, between others.

Contributions of researchers in the arts, humanities, social sciences, communication, information technologies and interdisciplinary studies are welcome. Qualitative or quantitative studies, essays and prospective papers could be written in English and Spanish. The book will be edited in English in spring 2008. The editors are Amaro La Rosa and César Carrillo

Abstracts deadline: December 31, 2007
